Mayor selects fire chief, then changes his mind

Marlin Howard reinstated
as Interim Fire Chief

ERIN L. MCCOY

Firefighters offered a round of applause when Bardstown Mayor Bill Sheckles announced Tuesday evening he would delay the final selection of a chief for the City of Bardstown Fire Department.

Members of the city and corporation fire departments had expressed their concern after Sheckles selected Kevin Moulton, a Zoneton Fire District assistant chief and St. Matthews firefighter, for the position.

Sheckles' selection went contrary to a Jan. 16 election in which Marlin Howard was named chief of the corporation by a 31-12 vote. At the time of the vote, Anthony Mattingly had been chief over both departments since 2005. After the vote, he remained chief of the city department, but Sheckles said he did not want to have two fire chiefs.

Since the city passed a new ordinance in February revising the process for selecting a chief, Howard has been serving as interim fire chief of both departments.

Moulton's selection was to go

Firefighters are concerned about what's in store for the City of Bardstown and Bardstown-Nelson County Volunteer fire departments. Volunteer corporation Board Chair Neal Pyle acknowledged Monday the corporation had considered the possibility of a split with the city.

Bardstown Mayor Bill Sheckles addressed the volunteer department, a nonprofit entity commonly referred to as the "corporation," at a regular training session Monday night regarding the mayor's recent selection for the new city fire chief.

Sheckles opted for Kevin Moulton, who comes from outside the two departments, over Marlin

NELSON FISCAL COURT Nat Rogers Road funding approved

Nelson Fiscal Court magistrates accepted $647,292 in funding from the state to raise a stretch of Nat Rogers Road known as Bull Run above flood levels.

The project addresses a low dip in Nat Rogers, or KY 46, that floods often, causing numerous car accidents through the years, most recently in November, when 71-year-old Boston man Ned Rosenbaum was killed.

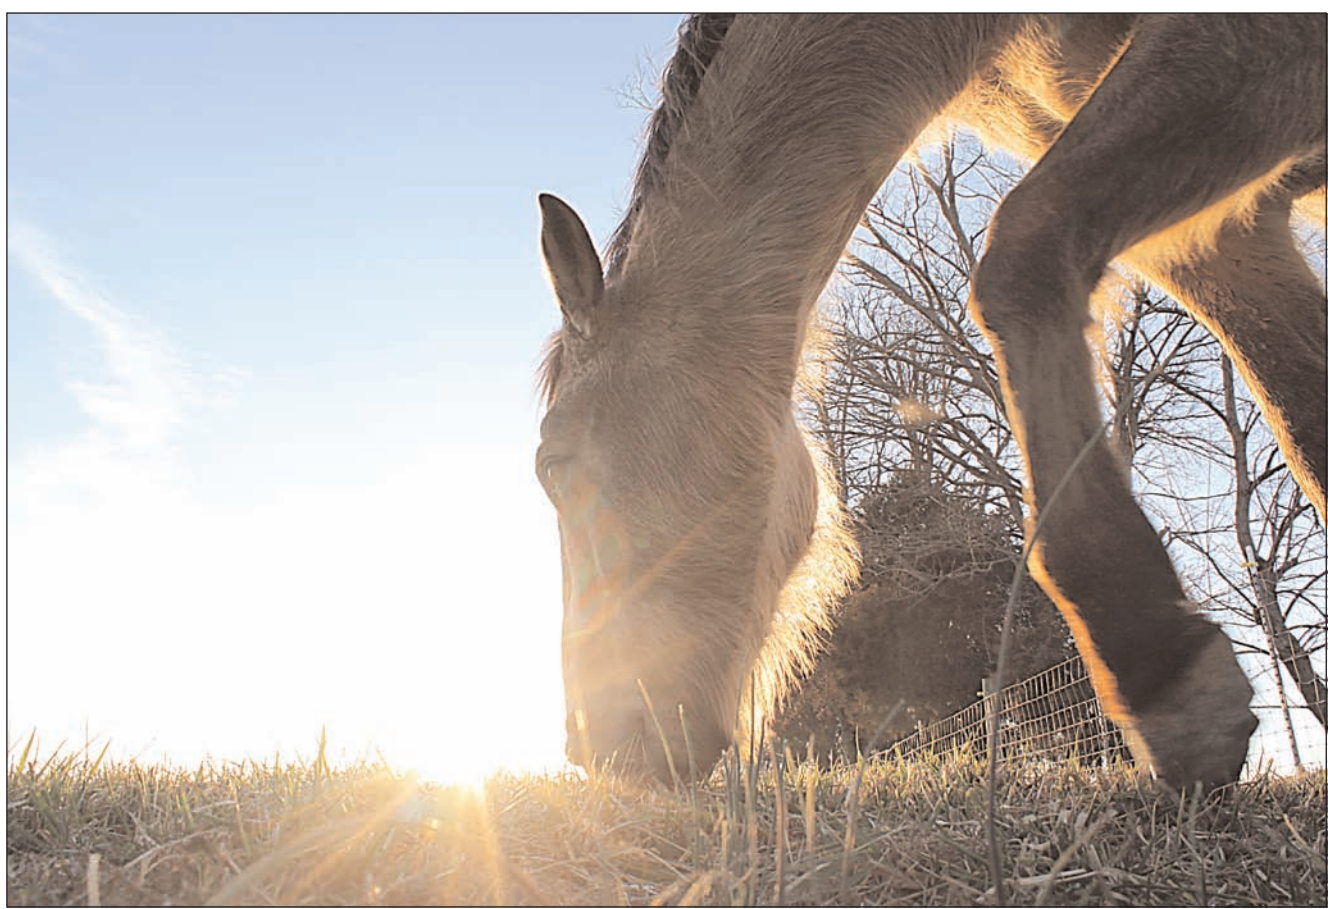

An estimate for the total cost of the project came in about $747,291. District 1 Magistrate Keith Metcalfe has agreed to pay the additional $100,000 needed for the project out of his blacktop budget over the next two years, since the area is in his magisterial district, Judge Executive Dean Watts confirmed.

Gov. Steve Beshear set aside funds to cover the majority of the project in February.

Momentum continues to spark Bark Park

BRAD BOWMAN

Despite the unpredictable weather, spring will eventually make it to Nelson County and allow us all time to enjoy outdoor activities. Whether shopping downtown is your sport or an outing at a local park helps shake off the cabin fever, the Bourbon Bark Park Board hopes to have a place for our canine companions to do the same.

Location for the park continues to be the greatest challenge for the board, which recently completed the application process to establish itself as a nonprofit organization, according to board member Jolene Reynolds.

"Our board has laid the groundwork to establish the dog park," Reynolds said. "We hope to educate members of our community, the Fiscal Court and City Council of what it will take. We were a small group that needed a vision and now we have it."

Local Marines return home after Afghanistan deployment

bbowman@cni.com

Bardstown Marines in the Military Police Company Alpha from Lexington have returned home after seven months of deployment in Afghanistan. Friends and family welcomed them home in Lexington Feb. 26 at the U.S. Marine Corp Office.

Sgt. Derek Clark, Lance Cpl. Zachary Stokes, Lance Cpl. Taylor White, Cpl. Matt Spaulding and Lance Cpl. Drew Sims trained for deployment overseas at the Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune in North Carolina March 29, 2011. They were deployed after coming home for a brief time in July 2011. They have been stationed at Camp Leatherneck in Helmand Province, Afghanistan. The unit provided security for combat logistic battalion, CLB 6, North Carolina, which acted as a re-supply unit.

It's the second deployment for Clark and Spaulding. Spaulding found Afghanistan much different than his first deployment in Iraq.

"The land is pretty much the same there, but with higher enemy activity than Iraq," Spaulding said. "We experienced multiple IEDs (improvised explosive device) and we took more small arms fire."

When they weren't escorting convoys they were stationed at Camp

Case dismissed against Springfield man indicted for tossing infant in a ditch

JESSE OSBOURNE
LANDMARK NEWS SERVICE

SPRINGFIELD — The case against a man indicted for two counts of first-degree wanton endangerment has been dropped because the complaining witness was unable to be located.

Timothy Lee Yonts, 42, of 86 Hardesty Road in Springfield, was originally indicted in October for allegedly pulling an infant, strapped in a car seat, out of a car and throwing the baby into a ditch.

According to a uniform offense report from the Nelson County Sheriff's Department, the car seat landed upside down in the ditch line.

Yonts allegedly tried to push another victim from the car prior to throwing the car seat, according to the report.

The report stated the victim was pulled out of the vehicle by her hair, into the roadway and then by the ditch line in the Nalley Court area in Bardstown.

Attempts to deliver subpoenas to the victim were mostly unsuccessful.

On two occasions, the subpoena was given to the victim's grandmother, as the victim was not available.

Another attempt on Jan. 27 was completely unsuccessful, according to paper work filed by the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office.

Finally, on Jan. 31, the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department noted that the mobile home at which the victim was staying at was gone and all that remained was an empty lot.

The case file contained sealed records that included information from the Cabinet for Health and Family Services. Nelson County Circuit Clerk was ordered to seal the records and the contents of the records couldn't be discussed without permission from Nelson Circuit Court.

A motion had been made earlier in the case for any records from Flaget Memorial Hospital, Nelson County EMS or the Cabinet for Health and Family Services to be delivered to Nelson Circuit Court.

Yonts was scheduled for a jury trial on Feb. 22. The charges were dropped during a pretrial conference on Feb. 20.

Stephen Foster auditions

Open auditions for the 2012 summer production of "The Stephen Foster Story" and "Seussical — The Musical" were held Saturday in the Bardstown High School auditorium. Choreographer Sherry Barnard and Lauren Bryan direct a group of hopefuls during auditions. About 20 people turned out for the auditions with an equal number coming out for the job fair held at the same time. Auditions have already been held at Western Kentucky University and will be held in Chattanooga this week.

AT RIGHT — Blake Whitlock, Hodgenville, speaks with Johnny Warren of Stephen Foster Productions during the auditions Saturday afternoon.

Man charged with purposely wrecking car, leaving hurt driver at the scene

STAFF REPORT

A Bardstown man is accused of grabbing the steering wheel of a moving vehicle, purposely wrecking the car, then leaving the injured driver at the scene.

Bardstown Police were called to the scene of a 2007 Saturn four-door on its side on KY 150, Springfield Road, near Pottershop Loop about 2:48 a.m. Tuesday.

Driver Kelsey Nichols, 19, Bardstown, had suffered head lacerations in the crash.

NaShon Williams

She was removed from the car and transported to Flaget Memorial Hospital by Nelson County EMS, a press release from Bardstown Police states.

Nichols reportedly told police that an ex-boyfriend, NaShon Williams, 18, a passenger in the car, had grabbed the steering wheel during an argument, jerked the wheel and caused the car to crash into a ditch.

"She further stated that she begged him for assistance but he climbed out of the vehicle and left her at the scene," the press release says.

Police found Williams not far away, at a family member's residence at 305 Harding Street. A blood trail reportedly led from the sidewalk to the front door. Williams was arrested without incident and booked in Nelson County Jail at 7:38 a.m.

Williams was charged with first-degree wanton endangerment and leaving the scene of an accident/failure to render aid or assistance. His mug shot shows an apparent chin injury, though the extent of his injuries was unknown by press time.

Nichols was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs under the age of 21. Test results are pending from blood collected by police.

The vehicle sustained moderate to severe damage.

Stephen Foster Productions managing artistic director Johnny Warren, left, and Dr. David Hedrick, Music Director of The Stephen Foster Story, listen to Courtney Glenn, Louisville, as she auditions.

Aerial photos of entire county to help PVA, other agencies

ERIN L. MCCOY
emccoy@kystandard.com

Aerial views of the entirety of Nelson County have been created for the Property Valuation Administrator's Office.

The PVA saved excess revenues for more than five years in anticipation of the $67,000 project.

"We have been saving for this for a long time. My office has paid for the initial cost for this one time, and then I'm going to provide it to the county offices," Property Valuation Administrator Barbara Tichenor said.

It's Tichenor's hope that the images, which provide views of the sides of buildings as well as views from directly above, will prove useful to agencies throughout the county, from emergency services to the Joint City-County Planning Commission.

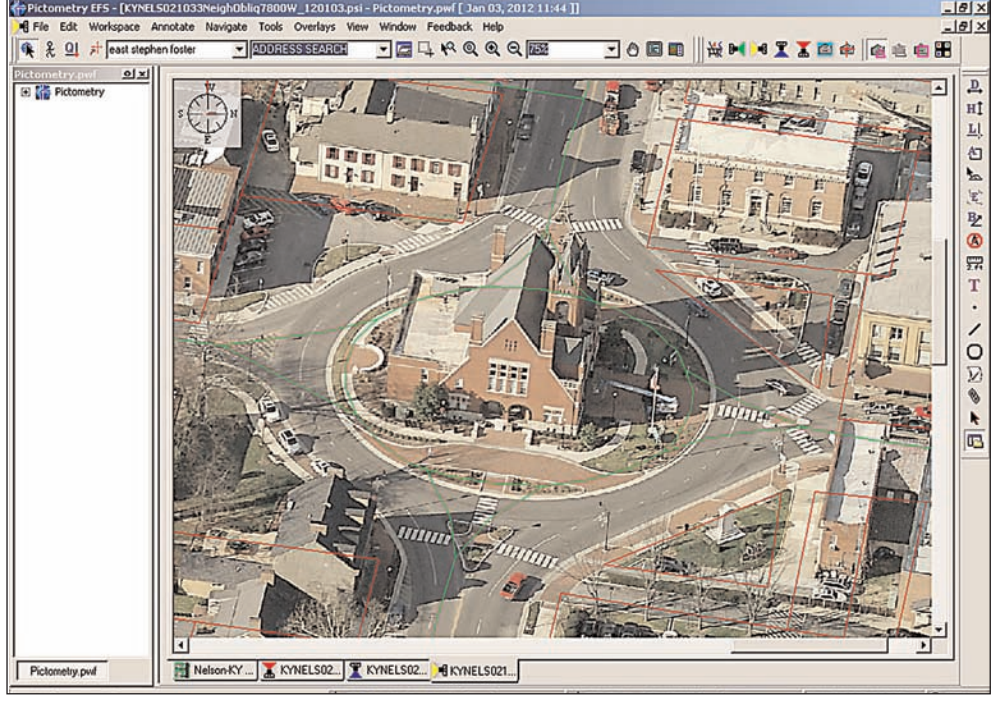

"For emergency services, it would be priceless," she said. For instance, views of the side of a building could help the fire department find alternate entrances into the building more quickly. "If it helps with 911, if it gets somebody there quicker and helps to save a life, it's priceless."

The images were taken during a period of less than a month.

"They flew the county from Dec. 20 through Jan. 12 for new aerial photography, and in the more populated areas like Bardstown and some around 31E and (KY) 245 has better resolution than it has in the rural," Tichenor explained.

For instance, looking at one house inside the highest-resolution areas, Tichenor and PVA staff could see a large amount of detail.

"We were looking at one in a subdivision here, and you can see the steps coming down from the deck and a trash can sitting by the deck and a gas grill," she said. "Out in the county you can still see. It's a little blurrier when you zoom in."

The PVA purchased the service from a company called Pictometry, which not only furnishes the images, but the software used to view them, set-up services, and training, which will take place at the end of March, when the PVA will begin to fully use the software.

For the PVA's purposes, the software is capable of measuring the width and height of a building and the distance between two structures. It also shows enough detail on certain properties that the PVA can determine whether new construction has occurred.

"It may eliminate even a need to go out there in some instances," she said.

In the long term, Tichenor said she didn't believe her office could afford updated images on a regular basis. However, if other agencies find it useful they might ultimately decide it's worth their investment, she suggested.

"I probably will not have funding for that again but it may be something if we can all chip in and update it," she said.

And if the maps are updated, the program may provide an easy way to detect changes, such as renovations or construction, on properties automatically. A program called "ChangeFinder" sketches outlines of buildings from a previous aerial and reconciles those with new images, providing a detail of changes that can be checked against requested permits.

At Tuesday's meeting of the Joint City-County Planning Commission, Director Janet Johnston-Crowe said accessing the program could be a big help to the commission in ensuring that changes have been properly permitted.

"Especially on non-conforming uses, when we have to go to court and say that someone's expanded, we will have great resolution to show this is how something looked in 2011 this is how something looks now," Johnston-Crowe said.

She said she hopes to find $4,100 within excess revenues carried over from last year and reserve funds in order to purchase a Geographic Information System capable of viewing the maps for the planning commission.

The maps won't necessarily be available for the public to view, but Tichenor compared them to Bing's "bird's eye view" mapping service.

"It's going to be a great tool for a lot of people," Tichenor said.

Man accused of stealing video game equipment

STAFF REPORT

A man was arrested in connection with a burglary on South Fourth Street in Bardstown last month.

Justin M. Adams

Justin M. Adams, 24, Bardstown, allegedly pawned an X-box video game system and accessories that were reported stolen from a Bardstown residence Feb. 22, according to a press release from the Bardstown Police Department.

When Adams was questioned about the pawned items, he allegedly made a number of conflicting statements, the press release stated.

Adams was arrested Monday on charges of second-degree burglary and receiving stolen property. He was lodged in the Nelson County Jail.

Tuesday's statewide tornado drill was canceled

Respect for recent tornado victims was reason

STAFF REPORT

Kentucky Emergency Management canceled the statewide tornado drill scheduled for Tuesday.

In an e-mail, Nelson County EMS Director Joe Prewitt stated the reasoning to be that so many communities are still cleaning up from tornadoes that came through the region last week and don't need to be reminded of what has happened so soon.

Communities in Kentucky hit by the tornadoic activity on Friday were still waiting on Tuesday for FEMA to arrive.

According to Emergency Manager for Nelson County, Joe Osborne, rescheduling won't happen anytime soon despite being on the threshold of tornado season.

"Everyone involved is tied to the crisis," Osborne said. "In my opinion, psychologically it wouldn't be good for anyone given the recent events."

Blue Grass Livestock Marketing Group offers assistance to farmers in need

Blue Grass Livestock Marketing Group has stepped up to offer several forms of assistance to producers after last week's tornados.

Owners have already offered to donate $5,000 to the Kentucky Cattlemen's Foundation (KCF) Disaster Relief Fund that is being set up to address the needs of cattlemen in rebuilding fences and facilities following the storms of last week.

"It is obvious that there are producers across the state in need of help and we are happy to step up to support those in need," Blue Grass Livestock Marketing Group COO Jim Akers said.

If producers are interested in selling cattle at any of their current markets and donating the proceeds to the KCF Fund, the stockyards will take care of all of the paperwork and make sure that the money is sent on to the Foundation.

In addition, Blue Grass

Marketing Group is willing to donate manpower to the efforts. If anyone needs help gathering cattle in the coming week, they are encouraged to give them a call at (859)255-7701.

KCF Accepting Donations

The Kentucky Cattlemen's Foundation (KCF) will be accepting monetary donations to address the needs of cattlemen in rebuilding fences and facilities following the storms of last week.

"Farmers across the state have been calling our office since the tornados hit wanting to know how they can help so we are working on a case-by-case basis to help farmers however we can," stated Kentucky Cattlemen's Association Executive Vice President Dave Maples.

Phone calls from some of the hardest hit areas have been received in the KCA office and are being dealt with on an individual basis. Many farmers have had buildings and fences destroyed while others have had entire herds killed in the storms. The monetary donations sent in will be used to directly assist producers in need and are tax deductible. Many areas affected are also in need of fencing supplies.

"These tornados have affected so many of our neighbors and fellow cattle producers and we just want to do anything that we can to help," stated KCA President Mike Bach.

Those interested in donating to relief efforts can donate online at www.ky-cattle.org or mail a check to the office at KCF Disaster Relief Fund, 176 Pasadena Drive, Lexington, KY 40503. For more information call the office at (859)278-0899.

EDITORIAL

Celebrate NIE week with us, local schools

Newspaper in Education Week is celebrated every year during the first full week in March. This week March 5-9 is set aside for us in the newspaper industry to pause and recognize the success that the NIE program has seen for more than 200 years.

If you are reading this editorial, then at some point in your life newspapers were introduced to you. For most of us, it was in our household while growing up. Your parents were probably avid newspaper readers, maybe even subscribing to more than one newspaper, while we were introduced to newspapers in school. Once a week or more our classroom teacher used the local newspaper as a teaching tool for spelling, math, science and civic lessons. This was an exciting activity for us as we saw the faces of people we knew in our towns. We read about our local government and issues they faced. It was a real life lesson plan that didn't seem ancient or worlds away.

The Kentucky Standard is proud to be a part of the NIE heritage. With the help from local businesses and readers like you, this school year we will provide 1,410 newspapers to 54 classrooms reaching 20 local schools for a school year total of 45,120 newspapers. Through the NIE program, some of our local school children will be introduced to civic lessons for the very first time. They will participate in classroom discussions that could spur them to understand and participate in government, vote in elections and become involved in their community.

While the teacher is the true hero in this scenario providing the lesson plan and critical instruction, it makes us proud that we are the vital teaching tool that grounds this lesson in real-life local experiences.

In all of our forms, newspapers remain one of the most remarkable, multifaceted and relevant resources available to teachers. While our venue of delivery has changed through time via web versions and E-editions, the message is still clear that local newspapers can engage students with contemporary ever changing textbooks.

Celebrate NIE Week with us and thank the businesses and teachers who help us bring newspapers into the classroom. Become involved by introducing a child to newspapers. The introduction you provide could be a lesson that will last a lifetime.

OUR VIEWS

God and country: United or apart?

The first amendment to the U.S. Constitution states “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.”. There is no mention anywhere in the Constitution about any separation of Church and State as many people believe. Simply put, the government cannot establish a state religion and government will not interfere in Church teachings.

Earlier this year, President Obama tried to work out a deal with the Catholic Church on how to administer health insurance for the Church's subsidiary business employees dealing with contraception. The Church said in good conscience it could not offer a plan that contradicted its own teaching and the President said if they were to operate in business they must follow the laws of the land like everyone else. Long story short, they worked out a deal in which both sides hoped to get what they wanted, but in the end neither side did. Where does religion end and business begin?

This is just one instance in which government and faith based organizations have clashed. In recent years the government has restricted where the 10 Commandments may be placed, prohibited teacher led prayer in school, and diverted dollars away from groups that don't adhere to current federal policies, such as abortion rights. The government has also stepped in when crimes have been committed against children or some other outlawed activity such as polygamy, still practiced by some Mormon sects.

KENNY FOGLE

Where does government have a right to say anything about religion and where should it back off? A century or so ago, it was easy. Most Americans were Christian and following the same set of rules on prayer and Commandments. Now with the demographics changing we see more Muslim, Jewish, Hindu, Buddhists and others in our communities where no one religion is dominant and that is the premise behind the prohibition on placing of the 10 Commandments in public areas or teacher led prayer in school. All religions claim public property. Abortion is a huge issue for most any religious group. Pro-life, pro-choice, when does life begin, who has the right to choose when a fetus becomes a baby and who decides if it matures or is eliminated? Unfortunately for many, government answers are usually not found through religious eyes. It involves people of all faiths or no faith at all and in a country that is based on majority rule, the moral answer may not be the secular answer. That is really what it boils down to, a civil government not administered by theologists or any religion. And it works just the same the other way, Churches not influenced or controlled by politicians. Both have to live side by side in this country and no one should be forced to do anything against their moral beliefs or ideals.

Should kids pray in school? Who will lead them? What prayers do they say? The City of New York in 1962 wrote a generic prayer that would work for all religions but the Supreme Court struck it down saying the government is not in the business of composing official prayers.

The separation of church and state as mentioned before was not included in the Constitution but interpreted by President Thomas Jefferson as such. He simply proclaimed that this would protect the government and the Church from each other and if history tells us anything, we know that in the past both have been guilty of heinous crimes against mankind based on mandates placed on each by the other. Theocracies such as in Iran are dangerous and China's insistence on a national religion is just as damaging.

There are no defined answers to these questions in this column. The passion each of us has for what we think is right, what we think is legal is based on two of the subjects most important in our lives. Religion and politics are here to stay.

Newspapers in Education week

Newspapers in Education Week is celebrated every year during the first full week in March. This week, March 5-9, is set aside for all in the newspaper business to recognize the success in adult and children's literacy with NIE programs.

In today's classrooms, textbooks are nearly a thing of the past. Teachers now visit websites for lesson plans using SmartBoards and handouts and promoting “shared” textbooks; where students are not able to bring the textbook home, but must leave them at their desk for the next class. Students are bringing their own technology to school for Internet use and research, including, but not limited to, cell phones with Internet, iPods, iPads, and lap tops. In an ever-changing world, some things remain the same — newspapers. In all of our forms, we are the most versatile, relevant and local resource available to teachers. Whether it is through web versions and e-editions, or good old print, local newspapers engage students with an ever-changing textbook.

Through the Newspapers

in Education program, The Kentucky Standard partners with our local educators to promote the use of newspapers as an educational resource. Teachers are provided with copies once a week or more at no cost to them or to the schools. Newspapers serve as a teaching tool at all grade levels for spelling, math and cost comparison skills, science, history and current events; all while improving reading and comprehension skills. Local news also helps students become informed citizens in our community and promotes involvement right here at home as they read about local happenings. Resources and materials are also provided on our website to serve as an aid for teachers, providing lesson plans and activities for newspaper use in all school subjects. We publish chapter stories and a weekly Kid Scoop page for students as well as our education pages every week. How exciting it is for students to open up the paper and see themselves and their classmates in print.

With the help of local businesses and loyal readers, this school year we will provide 1,410 newspapers weekly to 54 classrooms reaching 20 schools as well as three learning facilities in our community. Throughout the 2011-2012 school year our community will have provided 45,120 newspapers to local classrooms.

Celebrate NIE week with us and enjoy the pictures and stories of our local schools at work promoting literacy and life-long lessons of community.

>>GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Seat belts, pseudoephedrine top state talks

FRANKFORT — Another week goes by in a whirl of legislative meetings, visits from hometown folks and organized groups such as 4-H and the 874K Coalition. Even though the House has yet to act on the budget proposal, senators continue to educate ourselves and monitor the budget meetings in the House. In addition, senators continue to meet in small groups to review the different budget needs of the various agencies. We expect to receive the House proposal next week.

Let's dig in on the legislative happenings. Some of the bills passed address tragedies that have made the news. Many of you may remember the van carrying the family of Amish that collided with the truck on I-65 several years ago. Senate Bill 89 will close a loophole in the law and direct anyone riding in a vehicle with 15 or less passengers to wear seat belts. We have beautiful highways and byways and we want people to travel safely.

I sponsored Senate Bill 115, also known as Larry's Law, which will require an evaluation of a person prior to admittance into a personal care home. Personal care homes are a valid — and often the only — alternative for many families who have relatives in need of closer monitoring. However, in the case of Larry Lee of Lebanon, his disability required a higher level of monitoring and care. He was able to wander away from his personal care home and was not found until it was too late. It is for this reason that it is advisable not only for the protection of the person in question but also his or her family's peace of mind, to evaluate each person in order to determine whether a personal care home is the appropriate level of care.

Senate Bill 3 is aimed at reducing the number of meth labs in the state as well as meth usage. It allows for about a four month supply of cold medications containing pseudoephedrine at the maximum dosage without a prescription, meeting the needs of 90 percent of the legitimately consuming public. There are lesser dosages available and gel caps and liquid forms are excluded. Pseudoephedrine is an essential component of meth. Many of us remain haunted by examples of children and other blameless bystanders innocently picking up bottles in the woods or on the sides of roads and then getting sick and even burned. There is not one county in which law enforcement has not been put into direct danger from inhalation of toxic fumes. In addition, thousands of dollars are being spent on cleaning up these mobile labs. These are your tax dollars.

JIMMY HIGDON
STATE SENATOR

Our ultimate goal is the protection of the legitimate consumer as well as the public at large with the reduction of outlaw labs. Under SB 3, a person could purchase up to 120 full strength adult doses of pseudoephedrine a year or up to 30 such doses a month for four months. In fact, if you were to take a lower dosage, a person could take one every day of the year and not be impacted by the law. If you read the back of the box, the makers of Sudafed recommend that an adult not take the medication for more than 14 consecutive days without the advice of a physician. SB 3 would adhere to these instructions. This bill respects the personal responsibility of the consumer while addressing the legitimate safety and security needs of our communities and law enforcement.

Finally, Senate Joint Resolution 88 directs the Department of Education to standardize the evaluation parameters for teachers and administrators. With the push to maintain a high standard in the teaching professions, it is also important that we avoid a patchwork of requirement across districts. It is only fair that teachers and administrators know what is expected of them. SJR 88 will help ensure transparency and accountability in the evaluation process.

Note: Senator Jimmy Higdon (R-Lebanon) represents the 14th District including Marion, Mercer, Nelson, Taylor, and Washington counties. He serves on the Appropriations and Revenue Committee, the Licensing and Occupations Committee, the State and Local Government Committee, the Education Committee, the Program Review and Investigations Committee, the Tobacco Settlement and Oversight Committee, and the Transportation Committee. In addition, he is also the Chairman of the Budget Review Subcommittee on Transportation.

Exhibit loaned from Mary Todd Lincoln House

Abraham Lincoln invoked the phrase “A house divided against itself cannot stand.” The phrase referred to his belief that the nation could not survive without a solution to the question of slavery. Yet the Kentucky-born Lincoln might just as well have been talking about his in-laws.

His wife, Mary Todd, was born into a slaveholding household in Lexington, Kentucky. Of her 13 siblings, eight of them were Confederate sympathizers. The “A House Divided” exhibit explores how her family’s statements and actions affected the Lincolns throughout the Civil War.

The panel exhibit will be on display 10 a.m.-5 p.m. March 16-May 14 at Bardstown Village/Civil War Museum and is on loan from the Mary Todd Lincoln House in Lexington. Admission including museum is $6, children under 7 are free, 7-15 are $2. It was created in partnership with the Lexington Public Library and funded in part by the Kentucky Humanities Council, Inc. with support from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Kentucky Abraham Lincoln Bicentennial Commission (www.kylincoln.org).

Howard, who was elected chief of the corporation by a wide margin in January. But on Tuesday, Sheckles had changed his mind and decided against the hiring, leaving Howard as interim chief until a final resolution can happen.

This announcement came after the Monday meeting with the corporation. Since, the corporation is a private entity, the media was unable to sit in on the meeting.

After Sheckles' 15-20-minute statement, the corporation meeting continued behind closed doors while Corporation Board Chair

Neal Pyle and Howard met with City Council member Frances Lydian, one of several councilmen with whom they have met recently.

"We're glad to see open lines of communication starting with the council members," Howard said Monday night.

"It's exactly what we've been asking for for a while, to be able to talk with the council members in an open format, and that's not something that we've been privileged to at this time until just recently," Pyle said.

Pyle and Howard said they weren't sure what the next step would be for the corporation, especially considering the council's adoption of a new ordinance in February that would require the corporation to have the same fire chief as the city if it expects to continue operating on city property — namely, the main fire station on West Broadway Avenue.

"We held our annual elections in January," Howard said, "and this process that the City Council has taken on..."

"Changed everything," Pyle said.

"It's not something we can control," Howard added.

Pyle acknowledged the corporation has considered the possibility of a move from the city-owned fire station. The corporation owns Stations 2 and 3 on KY 245 and Louisville Road.

"The board has taken those matters into consideration, and as the chairman of the board we are looking at the future of the corporation, being that our interest is in the protection of this community, whether it be the city or the corporation. That's our foremost, first priority," Pyle said.

"We've never wanted for these two departments that have worked so flawlessly together for so long to move apart. That's not our intent," Howard added.

Pyle said firefighters are anxious about what comes next for the fire departments.

"I think all the firefighters are concerned. I mean, there's a lot of emotions going on right now. They're worried about protecting the community, and in saying that, they're worried about if we were to leave, where are we going? Where would they respond to — would they respond to the city station for a city run, would they respond to the corporation building, wherever that may wind up being? So those are a lot of answers that we don't even know 100 percent ourselves right at this time, and that's some of the stuff we have been working on over the last two weeks," he said.

Because the two departments share a great deal of equipment, Pyle pointed out that both could incur a great deal of expense if a split were to occur.

"We may go and make an emergency run for some person in the community once in their lifetime, but the cost that it takes to fund the fire service affects them every day, so those are ethical decisions that we're all still trying to make to hold that cost down as much as possible," Howard said.

Pyle said he would rather not comment on why firefighters chose to vote in Howard as fire chief at the Jan. 16 election.

"It's the democratic process," Howard said.

"The vote was 31-12, and that was a very large amount of people to put Marlin in place, and then now we're wondering where we're going to be. I think, as the corporation — Marlin is the chief of the corporation," Pyle said.

before City Council Tuesday night, but Sheckles announced to packed City Council Chambers that he would keep Howard on as interim chief for the time being.

The offer of a job to Moulton is off the table for now. Sheckles said he would continue to work with Howard but could offer no timeline as to when a permanent chief may be hired.

"All you all from time to time have said that we're members of the corporation, we're members of Bardstown. As far as I'm concerned, you're all one and the same," he told the many firefighters in the room. "We're not going to put any extra burden on the taxpayers of the city or the county to make this thing work."

Sheckles said after the meeting that there had been a breakdown in communication between firefighters and administration even before the Jan. 16 vote.

"That's what brought all this about," he said. He told the crowd Tuesday he wanted to keep communication open. "The lines of communication are always open and my door is always open."

Citizen Bobby Cecil told the mayor he thought there were qualified people on the fire department ready to take on the job of fire chief.

"We got plenty of people qualified in Nelson County to do the job," Cecil said. "He wouldn't go outside the county to get a car, so why a fire chief?"

Howard left the meeting Tuesday with a smile on his face.

"It's been such a busy time with this decision and I haven't prepared an official statement. I am proud to continue to serve the citizens of Nelson County. We have great firefighters. Even though they are volunteers they are professionals," he said.

"I'm hoping they just decide to hire Marlin as fire chief," said firefighter Jim Hatfield after the meeting.

A meeting with corporation firefighters Monday night may have helped open lines of communication.

"I just think that last night he got the true feelings of where this volunteer fire department and where the city department want to go," Fire Prevention Officer Billy Mattingly said.

A city ordinance passed in February requires the corporation to take on the city's fire chief if it is to continue operating out of the West Broadway fire station, which is city property. The volunteer department, a non-profit corporation, and the City of Bardstown Fire Department share the station at this time.

The city's new ordinance also revised the selection process for the fire chief.

ERIN L. MCCOY/The Kentucky Standard

Nelson County resident Bob Cecil commented at City Council Tuesday that he was happy with Mayor Sheckles decision and thought there were qualified people in the county for the position.

City ordinance previously called for an election by firefighters, followed by a recommendation to the mayor, who appoints the chief with approval by City Council. In the past, the mayor has generally opted to recommend the person elected by the corporation to City Council.

But Sheckles has said he is opposed to the idea of employees choosing their own boss, as the previous ordinance permitted.

The new ordinance leaves the selection of a fire chief up to the mayor.

A six-member search committee narrowed down the 12 candidates to three. That committee was comprised of three City Council safety committee members — Roland Williams, Bobby Simpson and Francis Lydian — two fire department members and Assistant City Administrator Larry Green.

The three finalists for the position were Moulton, Howard and Larry Naser, chief of the Meade County Fire Protection District.

ERIN L. MCCOY/The Kentucky Standard

Firefighters packed the City Council chambers Tuesday after a special meeting was called to discuss the mayor's decision for fire chief.

Mattingly did not apply for the position, Sheckles said.

On Monday, Sheckles expressed fewer reservations about his selection than he did at Tuesday's meeting. Sheckles said he met with fire department representatives about a month ago.

"They told me that there was three things they all wanted," Sheckles said. "They all wanted to stay within the same facilities and use the same equipment and share the same volunteer firefighters. ... They wanted to have one chief as well, and they wanted a change."

Sheckles said on Monday that he strove to fulfill those requests through his selection.

"I gave them what they asked for," he said.

A guest at Nelson Fiscal Court Tuesday morning asked Judge Executive Dean Watts and magistrates what would happen if the departments split. Watts said he had met with Howard.

"Marlin's ensured me that the county residents are still going to have protection and I have every, every faith in what they're doing," Watts said.

ernor has probably had 5,000 wish lists up there,” Metcalfe said after the meeting. “I’m just glad he pulled ours.”

Watts, state Sen. Jimmy Higdon, state Rep. David Floyd, Commissioner of Rural Roads Don Pasley and Kentucky Secretary of Transportation Mike Hancock also had a hand in acquiring the money.

The county will manage the project, and will hire a state-certified engineering firm to design the project to state standards, county Roads Supervisor Jim Lemieux said. He estimated bidding for the project may not begin until the end of the summer, because utilities in the area will have to be moved first.

“Our goal is to have this project done by the beginning of (next) year,” Watts told the magistrates.

“I would like to take this time to thank each and every one of you and thank you, Judge, for your continuing support in helping me with this project,” Metcalfe told Fiscal Court.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet sent out a press release on the funds Tuesday.

“This project is designed to correct a longstanding problem of water backing up and covering the roadway during periods of heavy rain,” Hancock states in the release. “This will improve travel in Nelson County for many years to come.”

County Clerk’s report

County Clerk Elaine

Filiatreau handed over $317,543.65 in excess revenues to the county for the 2011 fiscal year. Car sales have continued to be strong. Usage tax from car sales, of which the clerk’s office keeps forming one of the largest sources of revenue for the office, Filiatreau and bookkeeper Gail Brown said.

“I just think it speaks to Nelson County’s economy,” Filiatreau said. “Nelson County is blessed in the fact that we are holding up economically, at least from the standpoint of car sales.”

Brown said excess revenues are similar to the previous year’s, but there would have been even more if the county hadn’t invested $80,000 in a software system for its Land Records Department. The investment will ultimately amount to a savings, as the clerk’s office used to pay $40,000-$50,000 annually to lease its old system, Brown pointed out.

The renovation of the Land Records Department, known as “the dungeon” and located in the clerk’s office basement, is nearly complete. The renovation was funded by Fiscal Court.

EMS and dispatch report

Only minor damage was reported from last week’s storms, Nelson County EMS Director Joe Prewitt told Fiscal Court.

“We had reported to us about 10 small items during the storm Friday — tree across the road, power outage, things of that nature,” he said.

Nelson County’s HAZMAT 5 Mobile Triage Unit deployed by the Kentucky Board of EMS to deliver supplies and provide logistical support to West Liberty, which suffered severe tornado damage during Friday’s storms.

Nelson County EMS is experiencing more problems with its only four-wheel-drive ambulance. Prewitt recommended the county not spend any more money to repair the 2005 F-350, which has undergone $19,600 in repairs in the last 88,000 miles. The warranty ran out after 100,000 miles and the vehicle now has 188,000 miles on it. The vehicle currently needs up to $13,500 in repairs.

“Estimates to purchase a new ambulance to replace this one with would be $110,000 to $125,000 range.

Our vehicle replacement budget for this year only has $50,000 left in it, so this is why we will need to search for something in ... the used market to meet our needs for now,” Prewitt said in an e-mail. “We have been successful in the past on several occasions finding a used ambulance in good condition for around $20,000, although the market for ‘good used trucks’ has somewhat dried up.”

Fiscal Court requested EMS search for used trucks.

In other news:

• The county didn’t receive any bids for the former senior citizens building on North Fourth Street, and voted to reduce the minimum bid from $55,000 to $40,000 and re-advertise. Watts said one of the biggest detriments to the property may be that it has a parking lot in the back.

• County engineer Brad Spalding estimated construction on the Nelson County Senior Citizens Center may take another 30 days to complete. March 6 was to be the project’s completion date. Flooring, exterior doors and vinyl siding still need to be installed, among other parts of the project that are incomplete.

• Health departments throughout Kentucky are facing state funding cuts and may soon have to start cutting services, said Watts, who is chair of the Lincoln Trail District Health Department. The district faced a 6-8 percent reduction in state funding this year, he said.

• The county will begin to replace signs with more reflective signs as part of retroreflectivity requirements that state stop signs and regulatory signs, such as speed limit signs, must be replaced by January 2015, according to Lemieux. By 2018 street signs must also be replaced. The county has already purchased 100 stop signs for $2,900, Watts said.

• District 5 Magistrate Jerry Hahn expressed his concern that a property violating the county’s nuisance ordinance in Fairfield was not being cleaned up quickly enough. “What’s the use of going out there, spending the county’s money looking at it, taking pictures of it, and not cleaning it up?” Hahn asked. Watts argued 90 percent of nuisance properties in the county have been cleaned up after being notified of their violations, and said there are 10 or 15 such properties around the county.

• Watts distributed a preliminary copy of the 2012-2013 Nelson County Jail budget, saying that the jail has done a good job of maintaining a “positive operating budget.”

• Magistrates approved a performance bond release on Delaware Court and Bay Court, part of phase II of the Bridge Point subdivision. The roads will become county roads

• Watts said he hopes to replace two of the road department’s dump trucks with new trucks, one of which can be mostly funded by the county’s savings on road salt this year.

• Prewitt reported that Nelson County Dispatch’s first quarterly payment for receiving emergency cell phone calls totaled $42,497.39 in February.

Park

The board consisting of Vicki Renish, Therese Johnson, Marianne Wheat and Jolene Reynolds have kept the momentum going by establishing bylaws, membership rules and guidelines for those who would use the park. The board plans to give a presentation meeting 6:30 p.m. April 17 at the Nelson County Library in one of the community rooms.

“We have established committees that could work under the umbrella of the board,” Reynolds said. “We have prepared a foundation for people to coordinate fundraising, membership and issues in regard to the facility. We are more informed and following the Louisville Dog Run Association we have guidelines on how to function.”

The board has worked closely with Brian Davis from The Louisville Dog Run Association using the association as a model to address the logistics of making the dog park a reality. Now working on the fifth dog park in the Louisville metro area, Davis contributes the association’s success to desire.

“We did all kinds of fundraising,” Davis said. “We didn’t get any funding from the state or city. We sold T-shirts, gave dog washes and we had to show our public officials this was viable and there was a demand in our community.”

The association requires members to purchase an annual permit, provide proof of vaccinations and possess metro dog licenses. Other than paying for mowing services, most maintenance is done by volunteers to keep cost down. Visitors from out of town can gain access to the parks by emailing the association.

“The fifth park has been easier to get funding for,” Davis said. “We are matching donations from the city.”

The Bourbon Bark Park Board, once established, could provide opportunities for everyone to contribute, according to Reynolds.

“The main cost would be fencing,” Reynolds said. “The contribution could be tax deductible for members of the county or a corporation. There are opportunities for school groups or Boy Scouts needing an eagle scout project. We are actively seeking someone that will donate or lease the land to the board.”

The projected costs include fencing, a water spigot, and enough land to allow separation for small and large dogs. The park would rotate those areas to minimize ground wear. Reynolds totals the cost of the dog park at $20,000 and sees several possibilities for the park.

“It can go beyond just bringing your dog to the park,” Reynolds said. “It is a chance for people to socialize as well. Many senior citizens have dogs for companions and it could provide them a way to meet other people in their community.”

“It can go beyond just bringing your dog to the park. It is a chance for people to socialize as well. Many senior citizens have dogs for companions and it could provide them a way to meet other people in their community.

Leatherneck. In camp they had access to the Internet and phones to keep in contact with people back home. They were housed in rooms with seven or eight other guys with bunk beds. Spaulding's unit remains in touch with each other.

"Everyone in our unit is close. I am attached to people from Arizona, people I was deployed with before too," Spaulding said. "We call to check up on each other. It's hard going through the things we did, knowing you might not ever physically see those people again."

Spaulding has no regrets and knew if he didn't enlist like so many of his friends he would regret it. He missed his girlfriend and family, but felt it was something he needed to do.

Spaulding's mother, Julie Higdon, didn't feel so well. "People have no idea unless they've been through it," Higdon said. "I couldn't watch the news and I prayed on a daily basis."

"He was busy with missions and he only contacted us three to four times within a six-month period. We are trying to let him ease back into being home," Higdon said.

"He has missed his birthday, Thanksgiving and Christmas. We plan to wrap that all up into one celebration."

Clark's mother, Marsha Clark, shares Higdon's sentiments.

"If any parent has to go through this, you have to have God and he will help you go through it," Clark said. "You have to have a couple of people that you trust to be your support group. You need people who love you unconditionally."

Clark said she stayed as busy as possible and prayer kept her sane. Otherwise, she would have lost it.

"He doesn't understand how much we care about him and how special he is to us," Clark said. "Before my mother passed away I asked her to beg God to send his guardian angel to keep his faith and watch over him."

Clark is the only son of Marsha and Jim Clark. His mother describes him as a very determined young man that once he set his mind to something, you couldn't change it. Given that he was their only child, they told him there were many choices he could make it, but with the conflicts in the Middle East, the military wasn't an option, according to Clark.

"We received a letter his sophomore year of college at Christmas time congratulating us that our son had joined the Marines," Clark said. "He said he was going to tell us after Christmas because he didn't want it to be a bad one."

Clark went on his first deployment to Iraq before his senior year of college. According to his mother, his second deployment was more dangerous.

"They didn't sleep for sometimes five to seven days while in the convoys," Clark said. "A 60-pound bomb exploded underneath the vehicle he and Matt Spaulding were in. There wasn't a time that he didn't get shot at, encounter an IED, or be one of the few trucks that had protective plating underneath them when a bomb went off."

The returning Marines have been reporting to Lexington for debriefing to address PTSD, and educate them on healthy ways to make the transition from duty. For Spaulding, transitioning back home will take some time.

"It's weird being around so many people again. I'm used to being on my toes and now I have to ignore little noises that would alert me in combat," Spaulding said. "It's such a culture shock. We were in areas of Afghanistan where people had never seen a truck before. Our helicopters would scare them."

In between his deployments, Spaulding attended the University of Kentucky. He plans to finish his agriculture degree and doesn't have any definitive plans on what he will do in the future.

"One big thing I want people to know is that this is the 11th year of the war in Afghanistan and I feel like people have forgotten about it. I wish they would be more involved," Spaulding said. "I remember we would get letters from elementary students and care packages that raised the troops' morale."

BOYS' 5TH REGION TOURNAMENT

Tigers survive Knights' scare

Bardstown hangs on for a 63-60 win to advance to region finals

PETER W. ZUBATY
pzubaty@kystandard.com

CECILIA — Bardstown weathered a furious second-half comeback by Marion County, hanging on late for a 63-60 win Monday to advance to Tuesday's 5th Region championship.

The Tigers improved to 25-9 with the win; Tuesday's 5th Region championship game against John Hardin occurred after press time for this edition. Go to www.kystandard.com for a recap. Bardstown was in search of back-to-back region championships and its third region title in the past five years.

"It feels good" to be back in the region championship game, Tiger senior Anthony Myrks said, "but we can't be satisfied."

Bardstown led by as many as 18 on two occasions in the third quarter, the last time at the 2:40 mark after a Drew Starks stickback made it 46-28. But behind John Southall's 10 fourth-quarter points, the Knights (20-12) slowly chipped away at the Tiger lead, eventually pulling to within 62-60 on a Latrelle Irvin three-pointer with 4.5 seconds left.

After a Myrks free throw at the other end, Marion County had one last shot at forcing overtime, but Southall's three try at the buzzer came up short.

Devonte Grundy led the Tigers with 17 points and nine boards, and Cody Ramos added 12 points and 10 rebounds. Southall led Marion County with 22, while Irvin had 13 points and 12 rebounds.

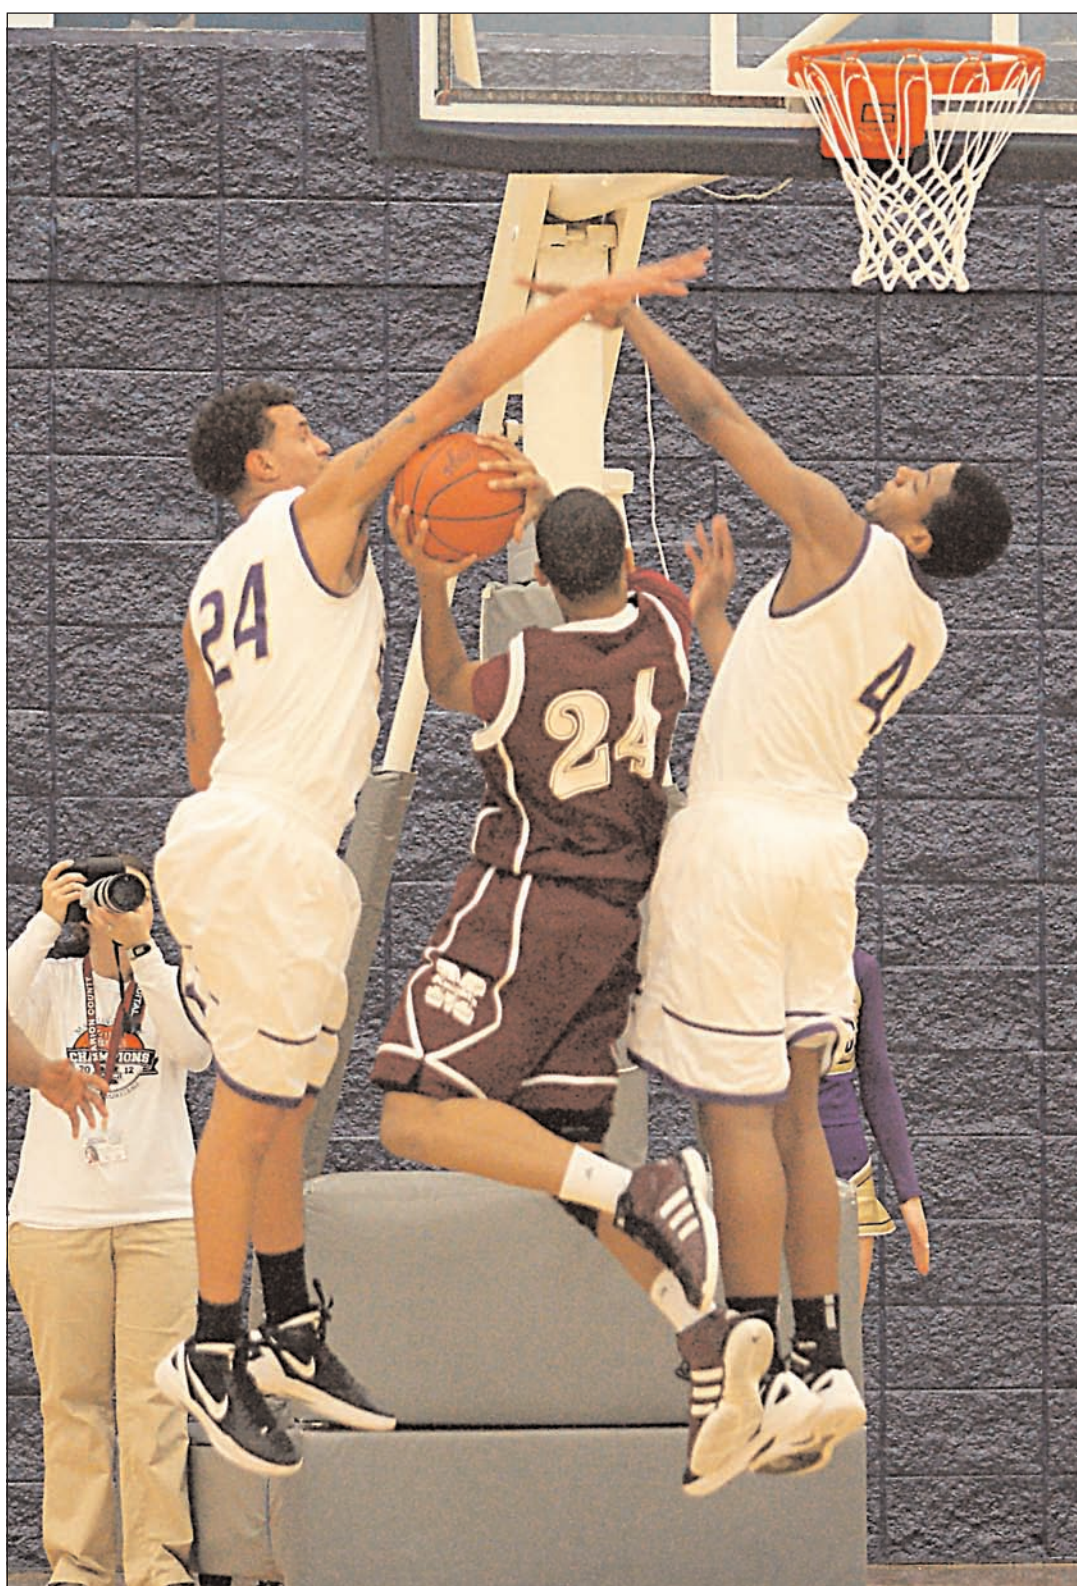

The Tigers enjoyed a commanding 45-27 advantage on the rebounding glass, helping make up for a rough 38 percent shooting night on 19-of-50 field goal tries. Marion County was 19-for-53 from the field.

"We came out tonight and controlled the boards," Brewer said.

Bardstown started out in an early hole, with Southall knocking down a pair of technical free throws — Myrks was whistled for trying to dunk in warmups — before a second even ticked off the clock. The Knights parlayed that into a 10-3 start that appeared even more imposing after Jordan Brewer picked up two fouls by the 4:40 mark of the first quarter and had to retreat to the bench.

"Any time one of us gets into foul trouble, we feel like someone else has to step up," said Myrks, who tallied 14 points, seven assists and two steals.

Bardstown's Cody Ramos, left, and Devonte Grundy cut off Marion County's Latrelle Irvin on his drive to the basket in Monday's 5th Region semifinals at Central Hardin. The Tigers held an 18-point lead in the third quarter, but had to hang on for a 63-60 win. Bardstown met John Hardin after press time in Tuesday's championsip. OUTDOOR TALES

Alabama rig legal for now

Since the Alabama rig burst onto the bass scene last year, winning tournaments and attracting fish as well as fishermen, it has been somewhat controversial.

The rig has five spines or wires which can pull five hooks or baits. It has been ruled illegal in a few places and has been prohibited from the Bassmaster Elite bass tour and Bassmaster Classic tournament.

However, Kentucky natural resources officials as well as those in Indiana have given the rig an OK, at least temporarily.

Indiana DNR director Robert E. Carter Jr. has signed a temporary rule that establishes a limit on the number of hooks allowed on a rig or lure array used for sport fishing, essentially making so-called umbrella rigs legal through the remainder of this year, according to a news release from the IDNR.

Until recently, umbrella rigs were a traditional saltwater trolling apparatus used effectively in the north-eastern United States to catch striped bass and bluefish, according to Ken Smith's Fishing Encyclopedia.

The rig is an umbrella-shaped frame of multiple wires from which lures or hooks are attached. It is designed to resemble a school of baitfish.

Andy Poss was the inventor/developer of the Alabama rig, and it burst onto the fishing scene last November at the FLW bass tour event on Lake Guntersville.

Pro angler Paul Elias started throwing one in practice and began landing big and multiple fish. The word of Elias' success spread like wildfire. He won the tournament with a four-day total of 102 pounds of fish, and earned a $100,000 paycheck.

Eight of the top 10 anglers in the tournament used the rig. From that point on, it was difficult to obtain one. They quickly became scarce, and questions quickly arose about their legality.

Bass Anglers Sportsmen Society (BASS), the FLW's rival tour, announced in January that umbrella rigs cannot be used in the Bassmaster Classic or the Bassmaster Elite Series.

In the meantime, states have been scrambling to see if umbrella rigs fall

Operating in borrowed office space behind a desk relocated from the basement of his own home, Rick Whobrey began work as executive director of the new Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame.

It's a modest beginning for a 53-year-old Elizabethtown resident who spent nearly two decades as an executive with Kentucky Farm Bureau. The Hall of Fame has no site and no exhibits and has yet to name the first members of its inaugural class of 100 inductees.

"It's pretty daunting," Whobrey said. "You only have one chance to get this off on the right foot."

Whobrey said he feels personal obligations to the Kentucky Association of Basketball Coaches, which is behind the Hall of Fame's creation, and to Elizabethtown city government, which joined the effort after the city was selected as the facility's site. Since starting the interview process late last year, Whobrey continually has been impressed by the commitment of all involved.

"Everybody's on task to have it done right," he said from the temporary office at Pritchard Community Center in Elizabethtown.

Whobrey also expressed personal commitment to honorees and, most of all, to the sport.

"I think back to when I was a little boy, what an event a

Anthony Myrks, left, hit five-of-six free throws over the final 1:07 Monday to help Bardstown hold off a Marion County comeback from 18 points down.

The Tigers rallied back, scoring nine unanswered points to finish the quarter. The run carried over into the second quarter as Marcus Cosby came off the bench to score eight points during the first four minutes — the junior hit three three-pointers and scored 11 of his 12 points in the first half and also grabbed seven rebounds — to lift his team to a 23-16 lead.

“Cosby kept us in the game,” Tiger coach James “Boo” Brewer said.

Bardstown went into halftime with a 30-22 lead, then caught fire in the early part of the third quarter, opening the half with eight unanswered points as part of a larger 14-4 run capped by a Grundy three-pointer that made it 44-26 and forced a Marion County time out with 3:21 left in the frame, bringing about visions of the Tigers’ regular-season 70-50 blowout of the Knights.

Brewer said his team relaxed a bit after getting the big lead and that he expected the Knights to make a run.

“It didn’t surprise me at all,” he said. “We got up 18 and we just started making some silly mistakes. I’ve got a bunch of seniors, and I told them, ‘we’ve got to finish the game.’ ... Give credit to Marion County — they fought to the end and gave us a good scare.”

Marion County managed to score the final five points of the third to pull within 46-33. Bardstown nursed a double-digit lead through the first four minutes of the fourth quarter, but Marion kept whittling away at the lead, igniting the Knights’ crowd at the 1:54 mark when Carlos Litsey slammed home a dunk off a post-up to cut it to 57-51.

Marion County eventually pulled within two points, but solid free throw shooting by Myrks — who hit 5-of-6 from the line in the final 1:07 — helped Bardstown stave off the upset bid.

“Any time a team makes a run you’ve just got to keep playing,” Myrks said.

Bardstown and John Hardin faced off in December, with the Tigers scoring a 55-48 road win. The teams also met last year in the first round of the 5th Region tournament, with Bardstown winning 62-57 on the way to the region crown.

inside or outside of their fishing regulations.

Indiana’s existing rules do not adequately describe whether or not umbrella rigs are legal.

The ambiguity with the umbrella rig is whether it should be defined as one lure with many parts or many lures on single line.

The temporary rule expires Jan. 1.

Lee McClellan, spokesman for the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources, said the Alabama rig was discussed at a recent meeting of the Kentucky Fish & Wildlife Commission, and “as of now is considered legal.”

However, McClellan said the KDFWR will continue to monitor the use the Alabama rig and its impact of the fishery resource.

High school fishing

Pro crappie angler Bill Braswell, a retired Kentucky conservation officer, sent a note supporting the effort by a number of area school districts which are considering fielding teams to participate in the new bass fishing competition sponsored by the Kentucky High School Athletic Association.

According to an announcement late last month by the KHSAA, it will sanction bass fishing as a varsity sport, starting with the 2012-13 school year. Following Illinois’ lead, Kentucky is the second state to sanction bass fishing competition.

KHSAA Commissioner Julian Tackett explained the addition of bass fishing will allow many Kentucky youngsters who don’t play any sport now to represent their schools in competition.

The KHSAA added bowling this year, followed by archery next year to encourage more high school students to participate in sports.

high school game was,” the Leitchfield native said. “It was bigger than life.”

He sees the game as something distinctive that deserves to be honored.

“High school basketball is just as much a part of the fabric of Kentucky as coal mines, race horses and the bluegrass we stand on.”

Whobrey and his wife, Kim, have lived in Elizabethtown since 1993 when he was promoted to director of field services by Kentucky Farm Bureau and assigned to the corporate office in Louisville. He left the company in 2011 as part of a reorganization.

Before formally beginning the job March 1, Whobrey had been working on organizational details, a corporate logo and preparing for the announcement of the first 16 Hall of Fame inductees to be held in Lexington on the eve of the boys’ Sweet 16 basketball championships. The goal is to open the Hall of Fame in Elizabethtown with 100 honorees in 2018, which is the 100th anniversary of the formal establishment of high school basketball competition in Kentucky.

In addition to organizing golf scrambles, benefit basketball games and other fundraising programs, Whobrey’s job goals include developing a network of Hall of Fame advocates around the state and sharing the vision with civic groups and school organizations.

For now, he’s the primary ambassador for the Hall of Fame concept.

“But it isn’t about me. I’ll have to be the face of the program for a while,” he said. “But this is all about the men and women who have made the contributions to the game and really excelled.”

Spring peepers welcome us back

Absolutely nothing says spring more than the distant chorus of spring peepers. There is a wooded stream just off Conner Station that is home to a cacophonous band of peepers all competing for as many females as they can. On a warm March evening, especially after a shower, spring peepers remind me of how glorious rural life can be. Just by listening a whole other world can be imagined.

Male spring peepers are the noise makers. The louder and faster they peep the luckier they get on their quest to attract females. As cocktail hour approaches the song to lure females begins and if you really listen you will hear a distinctive peep coming from tiny amphibians.

Spring peepers are tiny (no bigger than an inch in length) frogs that appear brown, tan, olive or reddish in color with a distinct X formation on their backs. If you are ever lucky enough to see one up close and personal you can further identify the peeper by its big toes that are used for climbing. Although they can climb, spring peepers prefer to nestle in debris in the forest floor; their preferred habitat is along wooded streams, moist lowlands and ephemeral ponds (temporary pools that dry up later in the season are ideal to lay their eggs because there are no fish present to eat their babies!)

Breeding is a nocturnal affair and when the female makes her choice she does so based on the male's size (larger peepers are chosen over smaller) and his song; mating takes place in the water where egg laying occurs shortly thereafter. The female lays her eggs on a stick or leaf in the water and the parents' job is done. Good luck little tadpole, which hatches in a week or two after egg-laying.

The life of a peeper averages three years if you are not eaten by a snake, salamander, bird or big spider. Mating age is about three years old, too, so otherwise if you are a spring peeper you nestle in debris during the day and then forage for flies, ants, small spiders and beetles for a meal and sing love songs at night hoping to get lucky during the spring mating season. The chorus of singing also serves a purpose in protection because the louder the song the more difficult it is for a predator to actually pin-point an individual meal.

When the weather turns the spring peeper goes into hibernation in a frozen cryonic state, in some cases; they find a log or loose bark to fare the winter and thaw out at about 28 degrees. Hearing a strong spring peeper chorus is not just some luxury to enjoy from nature; it is a serious indication of the health of our environment. Amphibians are indicator species, meaning they are the first to mutate, decline or die if our water ways are polluted. If the peepers go silent it is our fault! Be mindful of your lawn and garden practices, run-off issues from paved surfaces, your use of chemicals in and around the home, manure management on farms and anything that may potentially find its way into our local waterways.

Berry Center partners with St. Catharine College to offer agricultural degree program for students

The Berry Center of New Castle, Ky., and St. Catharine College jointly announced an agreement and partnership to provide a vital, interdisciplinary degree program in farming and ecological agrarianism. The program will embed academic coursework with fieldwork and immersion experiences, using nature as the standard, in an effort to bring awareness, knowledge and cohesiveness to students interested in farming, rural communities, local economies, agriculture, geographical sustainability and stewardship for the land.

The St. Catharine College campus is just outside Springfield and is situated amidst well-tended farms in the geographical center of the state. The College continues to grow and it will soon see the completion of its new Emily W. Hundley Library and Center for Graduate Studies. The Library will not only provide students with the most current advances in information technology, but starting with writings that have inspired the work of Wendell Berry, it will seek to provide the most complete agricultural collection in the state.

William D. Huston, President of St. Catharine College, was extremely enthusiastic about what this partnership will mean for the students of St. Catharine, as well as for the future of Kentucky, the nation, and potentially the world. According to Huston, "The work that The Berry Center is doing in collecting and archiving the papers of the Berry family, coupled with our collaboration with them as we develop this program and other offerings, will enable students to learn from the past in order to shape the future. St. Catharine College continually strives to stand among the foremost private colleges in the country known for innovative academic and student development programs, the spirited loyalty of our alumni, and the contribution of our graduates to society. This partnership with The Berry Center, Wendell Berry and his family takes us a long way in achieving these goals."

The Berry Center continues the passion of Kentucky author Wendell Berry, his father, John M. Berry Sr., a lawyer, farmer and co-author of the Burley Tobacco Program, his brother, John M. Berry Jr., lawyer, state senator and farmer and the lifelong focus they have placed on conservation, farming, and the economic and human health of local communities. Thus, the partnership between The Berry Center and St. Catharine College is a natural fit.

According to Mary Berry

Smith, the daughter of Wendell Berry and executive director of The Berry Center, "It is our intention to bring awareness and solutions to the issues confronting farming families in Kentucky and around the country. This degree program will ultimately bring cohesiveness and focus to issues of land use, farm policy, and local food infrastructure. We want to offer a solid farming education for our rural students who hope to continue farming or establish new family farms. And the interdisciplinary nature of this program will provide a meaningful education to anyone concerned with stewardship for the land. We are establishing this partnership with St. Catharine College in order to empower students to create a healthy and sustainable agricultural enterprise in our state and the nation."

St. Catharine College serves as Kentucky's only Dominican College. Embedded within the mission, vision and ethos of the College are the Four Pillars of Dominican Life, which promote Prayer, Study, Ministry, and Community as the means to engender mutual respect, care and concern for each other, all life and the Earth. Such stewardship is actually the most sincere form of love. And according to Wendell Berry, "We must love. And we must love what we do. So we should always ask, 'What works does this love propose?' St. Catharine College and The Berry Center want to begin to answer that question with this partnership."

It should be noted that Wendell Berry has just been named the 41st Jefferson Lecturer in Humanities. The annual lecture, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), is the most prestigious honor the federal government bestows for distinguished intellectual achievement in the humanities. Berry will present the 41st Jefferson Lecture in the Humanities at 7:30 p.m. Monday, April 23, at The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. In the lecture, "It All Turns on Affection," Berry will discuss man's interaction with nature, as depicted in history, philosophy and literature.

For more information on the partnership between The Berry Center and St. Catharine College, or the degree program, contact Mary Berry Smith, Executive Director of The Berry Center at (502)845-9200 or Dr. Don Giles, Vice President for Academic Affairs at St. Catharine College, at (859) 336-5082.

March is National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month

RACHEL BRINEY
HEALTH EDUCATOR
NELSON COUNTY HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Colorectal cancer is cancer of the colon or rectum. It is the second leading cause of cancer related deaths in the United States. The risk of developing colorectal cancer increases as we age. More than 90 percent of colorectal cancer occurs in those older than 50.

Colorectal cancer screening saves lives. However, many people who are at risk are not being screened. It is estimated that as many as 60 percent of colorectal cancer deaths could be prevented if all men and women 50 years and older were screened routinely. Some people may need to be tested earlier if they have a family history of colorectal cancer or have inflammatory bowel disease.

Screening tests can find precancerous polyps (abnormal growths) in the colon or rectum. These polyps can be removed before they turn into cancer. The screening tests consist of fecal occult blood test; colonoscopy; and flexible sigmoidoscopy.

According to the American Cancer Society, the top five recommended ways to prevent colorectal cancer include:

1. Get screened for colorectal cancer regularly
2. Maintain a healthy weight throughout life
3. Adopt a physically active lifestyle
4. Consume a healthy diet with more fruits, vegetables, and whole grains
5. Limit consumption of alcoholic beverages

Early stages of colorectal cancer don't always have symptoms. Some symptoms that people may have include:

- Blood in the stool or rectal bleeding
- Stomach problems such as cramps and bloating
- Losing weight without trying

- Vomiting; Diarrhea
- Being tired all the time

If you have a family history of colorectal cancer or any symptoms, see your health care professional. For more information on colorectal cancer, visit www.preventcancer.org or www.cdc.gov/cancer/colorectal/, or contact the Nelson County Health Department at 348-3222.

>> AROUND KENTUCKY

Here's a sampling of events you might want to check out

Through Aug. 26: A new exhibit, "About Face: Kentucky Artisan Works Inspired by the Human Face," opened March 3 at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea, and will be on display through Aug. 26, 2012.

This exhibit features a wide range of works in which the human face is a central element, focal point or inspiration. Created by 43 Kentucky artisans working in photography, painting, fiber, clay, gourds, wood, bronze, collage and mixed-media, this exhibit showcases both realistic and abstract works.

A public meet-the-artisans reception will be held Sunday, March 18, 1-3 p.m. at the Kentucky Artisan Center in Berea. The center is at 200 Artisan Way, just off Interstate 75 at Berea exit 77.

The center's exhibits, shopping and travel information areas are open winter hours daily 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., with the cafe open 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Admission is free. The center currently features works by more than 650 artisans from 100 counties across the Commonwealth. For more information call 859-985-5448 or visit the center's website at www.kentuckyartisan-center.ky.gov.

March 8: Women of all ages, ethnicities, religions, and walks of life, sharing moments when they were audacious, outrageous and courageous...now That Takes Ovaries! "That Takes Ovaries" - a book, a play, and an open mic night - will be hosted at Elizabethtown Community and Technical College at 6:30 p.m. March 8, International Women's Day in honor of Women's History Month. "That Takes Ovaries" is an international movement about empowering women and girls to be bold and brazen. Several vignettes of brave and gutsy actions by different women will be performed by ECTC students. Then the audience is invited to share their moments of courage, with short, personal stories that can be playful, serious, spontaneous, calculated, smart, sexy, and/or an example of leadership - anything that when you think about it today, makes you nod your head with pride or even semi-disbelief and think, "Wow! I did that!" The event will be held on Thursday, March 8 at 6:30 p.m. in room 212 of the Regional Postsecondary Center on ECTC's Elizabethtown Campus. For more information on "That Takes Ovaries," visit the website at www.that-takesovaries.org. For specific information about the ECTC event, contact Deena Lilygren at 270-706-8582 or dilygren0001@kctcs.edu.

March 8: Community Coordinated Child Care (4-C) will have a workshop "Getting Started-Family Child Care Home," 4-5:30 p.m. March 8 at the S-C office, 54 First St., Elizabethtown. The training is for those interested in starting a certified family child care home. Pre-registration is required by March 5. March 10: On Saturday, March 10, Elizabeth Worley, of Lexington, will demonstrate her reed basketry 10:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea.

Worley grew up in an Army family and lived in many places before finally moving to Elizabethtown. She went to college to study business and, after marrying, began working at Fort Knox. When she and her mother became interested in basketry, her mother took a class and then taught Worley. After learning the basics, they studied books and soon were making up new basket patterns of their own.

A selection of works by Worley is regularly found at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea, located at 200 Artisan Way, just off Interstate 75 at Berea exit 77. The center's exhibits, shopping and travel information areas are open winter hours daily 9 a.m.-6 p.m. with the cafe open 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Admission is free.

The center currently features works by more than 650 artisans from 100 counties throughout the Commonwealth, and a special exhibition, "About Face: Kentucky Artisan Works Inspired by the Human Face," on display March 3-Aug. 26. Bethlehem students visit Washington, D.C.

Bethlehem High School Students for Life recently visited Washington, D.C., to participate in the national March for Life. Each year on Jan. 22 (the date in 1973 that abortion was legalized in the U.S.) more than 300,000 citizens converge on Washington for the annual march to stand as a witness to their belief life is sacred from the moment of conception to natural death. The trip has become something of an annual pilgrimage for Bethlehem's Pro-life group since its formation three years ago. The trip included not only the march but also the National Pro-life Mass at the Basilica of the Immaculate Conception the night before, which has thousands of Catholics and hundreds of bishops present in a standing room only crowd.

Faculty sponsor Stuart Hamilton, and current student club president Rebekah Smith, planned the trip in conjunction with the local chapter of Kentucky Right to Life. With the aid of Pulaski counties.

Paula Caldwell, coordinator for undergraduate admissions, said Campbellsville University will match up to $1,500 of a student's KEES money.

"The KEES-Matching Scholarship at Campbellsville University is a wonderful opportunity for the commuter-based market to earn additional money for college," she said.

Caldwell said a large part of a student's decision to attend college is often based on how much financial aid they will be receiving or if the college is affordable to them.

"CU's increase of the K E E S - M a t c h i n g Scholarship and the addition of several counties will definitely benefit these students," she said.

The scholarship is renewable, she said, and "It gives those eligible the opportunity to add up to $6,000 to their financial aid over four years."

Caldwell said a student must meet the admission requirements to Campbellsville University of at least a 19 on the ACT or 1340 on the SAT.

"CU's KEES-Matching Scholarship is a primary example of how we are adding value to state financial aid programs," Chris Tolson, director of financial aid, said.

Tolson said CU has assisted 250 students during the current academic year with $250,000. She anticipates CU will assist about 300 students next year with nearly $350,000 in resources.

"Beginning with the 2006-2007 academic year, CU began providing matching scholarships KEES awards up to $1,000 for students from eight counties in our service area.

Tolson said the projection is that the added scholarship monies CU is giving local students will raise the number of students receiving this assistance to a minimum of 300 full-time undergraduate students from the 14-county region.

She said CU also provided more than $15 million during the 2011-12 academic year in CU institutional financial aid. She said the amount will increase in the 2012-13 academic year.

"I think the KEES-Matching Scholarship does show how we value KEES," Tolson said. "We want to help students afford college any way we can."

For more information about the KEES-Scholarship program, contact Tolson at (270) 789-5013 or cytolson@campbellsville.edu or Caldwell at (270) 789-5105 or pscaldwell@campbellsville.edu.

fundraising and generous private donations, more than 30 of Bethlehem's students attended the March. Traveling with them were parishioners from various Catholic churches and schools including Sacred Heart and St. James in Elizabethtown. "It really is an amazing experience," stated senior Rebekah Smith, "to be with thousands of Americans who believe the same thing you do. You realize that we really can make a difference."

‘The Artist’

Oscar-winning old-fashioned romance filmed in an old-fashioned way

Movies: Starting with silent/black & white; special effects; talkies; color; 3D; wide-screen; stereo sound; digital film; CGI spec effects; digital projection; 3D; and finally back to silent/black & white. Films have gone through many technologies. Some have replaced earlier processes such as talkies after silent even though there were naysayers who proclaimed that sound would ruin the movies. Color would also ‘ruin the movies.’ But films have outlasted each ‘improvement’ and audiences still converge on their neighborhood movie palaces year after year.

“The Artist” which won Best Picture at this year’s Academy Awards ceremony is a novelty referring back to the earliest motion pictures without speaking, almost, and in living black & white. This retro version of entertainment viewed by millions around the world is a special film which owes much to the contagious smiles of its leads. It is an imaginative film which takes us to how American Idol might have looked in 1927. In most respects it tells its story of early motion pictures, the switch to talkies, and the effect of the Great Depression on the industry without need of dialog. Of course, there are moments when the lack of speech makes for awkwardness even with the dialog cards. But that lack is negated by the wall-to-wall musical score provided by Ludovic Bource.

FRED ALLEN
>> ALLEN’S ALLEY
Film and Play Reviews

Director Michel Hazanavicius has given “The Artist” a brashness and overblown quality which brings back that naivete which was necessary to make a film without dialog a success. It seems exaggerated until we realize that hyperbole is exactly what’s needed to tell the story. Hollywood 1927: George Valentin (Jean Dujardin) is a silent movie superstar. The advent of the talkies will sound the death knell for his career and see him fall into oblivion. For young extra, Peppy Miller (Berenice Bejo), it seems the sky’s the limit and major movie stardom awaits. “The Artist” tells the story of their inter-linked destinies.

A silent film is new for most of us. It may seem to be a showpiece famous for its curiosity, but it is more than cinema; it shows us history in the making — one man’s grief mediated by his willingness to go in a new direction. French actor Dujardin deserves his Oscar as Best Actor. “The Artist” will not make you jump out of your seat, but it is irresistible and entirely unique. [Not playing locally.]

Family Rating: PG-13 for a disturbing image and a crude gesture. Also starring John Goodman, James Cromwell, and Penelope Ann Miller. Also written by Hazanavicius. (1 hr. 40 min.)

Also opening: THE LORAX. 3D, 2D.[Unpre-viewed]. Dr. Seuss’ classic children’s book animated with the voices of Zac Efron, Danny Devito, and Betty White.

Family Rating: PG for brief mild language, guage and drug references.

City moves to consider
Sunday alcohol sales

Tourists who visit Bardstown this summer may — for the first time — be able to order their favorite alcoholic beverage with a meal on Sunday.

Bardstown Mayor Bill Brown said the issue of Sunday sales has been kicked around long enough.

The groups supporting the measure “have done their homework” and have proven there’s support for such a move, Brown told Bardstown City Council Tuesday night.

“I think it’s time for the City Council to review the situation,” he said.

A request to approve alcohol sales was brought before the Council in October by Jessica Parrot-Smith, president of the Hospitality Association of Bardstown/Nelson County.

Forgiveness can bring love into world of uncertainty

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago you printed a poem about forgiveness in your column. It described very well the benefits of the practice, and it was accompanied by a sort of "forgiveness schedule" for every day of the week. I clipped the column and saved it, but over time I seem to have lost it. Could you please run this piece again?

JEANNE PHILLIPS

>> DEAR ABBY
Syndicated Columnist

DECIDE TO FORGIVE
Decide to forgive
For resentment is negative
Resentment is poisonous
Resentment diminishes and devours the self.
Be the first to forgive,
To smile and to take the first step
And you will see

happiness bloom
On the face of your human brother or sister.
Be always the first
Do not wait for others to forgive
For by forgiving
You become the master of fate
The fashioner of life
A doer of miracles.
To forgive is the highest,
Most beautiful form of love.
In return you will receive
Untold peace and happiness.
And here is the program for achieving a truly forgiving heart:
SUNDAY: Forgive yourself.
MONDAY: Forgive your family.
TUESDAY: Forgive your friends and associates.

WEDNESDAY: Forgive across economic lines within your own nation.
THURSDAY: Forgive across cultural lines within your own nation.
FRIDAY: Forgive across political lines within your own nation.
SATURDAY: Forgive other nations.
Only the brave know how to forgive. A coward never forgives.
It is not in his nature.
Since I cannot reprint the continual avalanche of requests I receive for reprints, for those who desire them, my "Keepers" booklet can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby Keepers Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. Many people have told me it makes a welcome gift for newlyweds, new parents, animal lovers, those who are grieving, and anyone who is recovering from an illness because it's a quick and easy read, and filled with wisdom and humor on a wide variety of topics.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You have a strong sense of direction, no matter which way you turn. Listen to your sixth sense with regard to money. Focus on the present, and maximize your financial security. Tonight: Clear out your desk or workspace.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ No one can deny your creativity when you decide to apply your focus and ingenuity to a situation. You can make the unworkable workable. Be sensitive to a situation where you suspect the other party might be out of sorts. You do not need an emotional collision. Tonight: Let your hair down.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Stay close to home, but be smart and don't push your luck. You could be overly tired and dragging from recent pressures. Give yourself a break from whatever is creating this stress. Tonight: Happy at home.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You might want to have a long-overdue conversation. Be careful, as one of you could be angrier than anticipated. If it is you, be sure to clear the air in a way that does not close down a conversation. Tonight: Make it easy.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You could decide that you would prefer to stand back and assess a situation from a distance. You have a strong sense of humor and enjoy yourself no matter what. Those you answer to clearly are favorably disposed toward you. The timing is right to make an important request or talk to these people. Tonight: Treat time.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Confusion surrounds a key person. If you overthink, you will not know which way to go. Be spontaneous, and you naturally will draw the results you want. Someone you care about lets you know that he or she would like to be around you. Tonight: The world is your oyster.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Pull back some, and understand what is happening behind the scenes. Your sense of humor goes a long way toward resolving a problem, in that you detach and become less involved. Be careful when expressing your dismay. Tonight: Vanish quickly!
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Zero in on the basics during a meeting. You finally gain someone's confidence, and feel much better as a result. Be sensible when dealing with an angry or upset person. This person might not be able to contain him- or herself. Tonight: Where the fun is.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Stay on top of your responsibilities. Though much could be happening around you, be sure to keep your plans and schedule intact. You have enough energy to squeeze in an extra event with a friend. Worry less. Tonight: Know when to call it a day.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Your ability to detach and see what others refuse to see earmarks your abilities, especially today. Creativity seems to flow naturally between you and others. A mere suggestion could trigger a great idea. Tonight: Where the fun is.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You might be dealing with one person after another. Everyone has something he or she needs your opinion on. Your nature is unusually giving, especially now. Still, do not toss your plans down the drain. Tonight: Dinner for two.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You need to sort through what you must do, as opposed to what you want to accomplish. Others need your input and could be quite demanding. Trust your judgments with a key person. Tonight: Hang out with a lively friend.
